Accounting Refresher Workshop -1.pdf

Additional Comments: Accounting majors know that getting good grades, particularly in upper level accounting courses, is especially important as students look toward job interviews and graduate school acceptances. For many accounting students, their first challenging accounting course is Intermediate Accounting I. This difficult course covers topics and situations that involve the more complex aspects of financial accounting and covers a great deal of material in a short amount of time. Many students enrolling in Intermediate I find that they have forgotten much of the material they learned in their introductory financial accounting classes; for most students, it has been at least one year since they’ve thought about debits and credits and the preparation of financial statements.
This article presents the results of an Accounting Refresher workshop offered to incoming Intermediate Accounting I students. This optional workshop, held the Friday afternoon before classes begin, is offered to students at no cost. Participants have the opportunity to network in small groups with future classmates, interact with upper-level students who have successfully completed Intermediate I, and refresh their basic financial accounting skills.
